

As Tories try to keep 3,000 refugee children out of Britain...

Refugees welcome here

Support Calais Convoy

Last week the Tories voted down attempts to allow 3,000 unaccompanied refugee children into Britain - this is a disgrace.

The children are innocent victims of war. But Cameron and Co are more interested in looking tough on immigration in the run up to the EU referendum than in caring for those who deserve our support.

Erich Reich, chair of the Association of Jewish Refugees, the organisation that represents “Kindertransport” survivors (Jewish children who escaped the Holocaust) has written to Cameron calling on him to “intervene to help some of the most vulnerable victims”.

There will be a further vote in the Commons next Monday on an amendment calling for refugee children to be allowed into Britain.

We support the attempts to allow refugee children into Britain and believe that the borders should be opened across Europe to allow refugees to escape poverty and war.

We support the refugee solidarity convoy being organised by Stand up to Racism, the People’s Assembly and a number of trade unions on 18 June.
